

Long ad – Lecturer Position

The Department of Statistics at the University of Georgia invites applications for a position as Lecturer, starting August 2010. The person in this position is primarily expected to teach undergraduate students, predominantly in sections of an introductory statistics course for business students. Like other faculty members, the person is also expected to be engaged in departmental activities. A Ph.D. degree in Statistics, or a closely related field, is desired, although applicants with an M.S. degree in Statistics and an exceptional record of teaching excellence will also receive consideration. Scholarly credentials must reflect a strong commitment to teaching at the undergraduate level. In the form of a single PDF file, please send an application letter, curriculum vitae, and a statement of teaching philosophy to teach@stat.uga.edu. Under separate cover, applicants should also arrange for a graduate school transcript and at least three letters of reference to be sent either via e-mail or ordinary mail at the address below. Applications received by March 26, 2010, will be assured consideration. For more information about the department and the university, please go to <http://www.stat.uga.edu>.
