OF TEACHING & LEARNING

The Auburn Symposium
February 19 & 20, 2010
Auburn University

Most higher education faculty members can benefit from increased awareness of cross-cultural differences related to teaching and learning and on more effective teaching techniques that this knowledge suggests. This two-day symposium will bring together scholars from around the world, together with faculty members, graduate students, and higher education administrators in an interactive forum to facilitate learning and change in educational practice.

Unique Format: The symposium will combine didactic plenary sessions with interactive discussion sessions to assist with integration and application of plenary information.
