Welcome Back!

War Eagle! Fall is in full-swing! Our office is full each day with families visiting campus, our admissions advisors are on the road and visiting your schools and the applications for fall 2013 are being sent to Auburn. Fall is truly my favorite time of year! With this first Counselor Chronicle of the 2012-2013 school year, I wanted to take a moment to introduce myself. My name is Allison Doty, and I am the new assistant director for Admissions and Recruitment. Having previously served as the regional recruiter for central and south Georgia, I am familiar with the recruitment process and the daily challenges faced by each of you. I look forward to learning new and better ways Auburn can assist you and your students as I continue in this position.

We’ve enrolled another great freshman class this year! 3,852 new freshmen joined the Auburn Family in August. The class comes to Auburn with an average 3.78 GPA and 27 ACT.

I am also excited to announce we have hired a few new admissions advisors to the University Recruitment team. We have also updated our territories which you will see in the following pages of the Counselor Chronicle.

We look forward for the opportunity to work with you and your students this year. From everyone here in the Office of University Recruitment, we hope you have a great fall semester. Should you ever need me or anyone from our staff, please do not hesitate to contact us.

War Eagle,

Allison Doty

Auburn Names Boosinger New Provost and Vice President for Academic Affairs

Following a national search, Auburn University President Jay Gogue selected Timothy Boosinger as provost and vice president for academic affairs. Boosinger, who has served as interim provost at Auburn since June 2011, will continue to oversee the academic programming for 12 colleges and is responsible for fostering the advancement of the university’s strategic plan. In total, 25 academic support units and colleges report directly to the provost. These units focus on the instructional, research, and outreach missions of the institution, operating under a total budget of $290 million. He currently serves as chair of the Enrollment Management Council, the University Campaign Feasibility Task Force, and the Efficiency Task Force. He has an extensive background in teaching, research, and administration, serving as dean of Auburn’s College of Veterinary Medicine from 1995-2011.

“Dr. Boosinger has done an excellent job as interim provost for the past year and we look forward to his continued leadership as provost and vice president for academic affairs,” Gogue said. “Our administration and faculty have enjoyed working with him to strengthen Auburn’s academic programs. His experience as an Auburn dean for 16 years gives him special insight into the needs of our 12 colleges and schools. Most of all, I believe our students will benefit as he helps shape the future of Auburn University.”

Boosinger, an Auburn faculty member since 1983, earned a doctor of veterinary medicine degree and a PhD in pathology from Purdue University. He received the Distinguished Alumnus Award from Purdue’s School of Veterinary Medicine in 2004. Before being appointed dean of the College of Veterinary Medicine, Boosinger served as the associate dean for academic affairs from 1993-95. He has served as a university senator and has chaired search committees for university leadership positions.

“I am honored to have been asked to serve as provost and look forward to working with students and faculty as we address current and future challenges,” Boosinger said. “As a land-grant university, we have a continuing commitment to the improvement of the quality of life in our state and nation, and I am pleased to be a part of that mission as Auburn’s provost.”
