Schedule of Auburn University's Outreach Activities and Events

Assessing Outreach Programs

Auburn University follows national accreditation guidelines for assessment and evaluation of the effectiveness of its outreach non-credit programming, especially those that award continuing education units (CEUs). These guidelines promote systematic analysis of the processes through which learners demonstrate their attainment of learning in a specific activity as well as the effectiveness of the program in fulfilling its established learning objectives. Programs awarding CEUs must document that these processes are in place and are conducted appropriately.

In non-credit instruction, learning assessment may take diverse forms, such as performance demonstrations under real or simulated conditions, written or oral examinations, written reports, or completion of a project. Program evaluation typically examines the effectiveness of instructional planning and execution, selection and preparation of instructors, logistics and operations, and the extent to which learning outcomes were achieved. For more information on national guidelines and models for non-credit program assessment and evaluation, contact the Office of Outreach Information and Program Certification at 844-4730.

FACT at a glance:

IACET surveyed more than 800 institutions and conducted field tests with 92 programs in developing its recommended assessment models for non-credit instruction.
