• Track Three: Engagement Boundary Spanning

www.auburn.edu/outreachsymposium
Dear symposium participants,

Welcome to our fifth Outreach Scholarship Symposium. Based on the success of our past symposia, we have decided to expand our program by integrating sessions on funding and support for engagement. This allows us to move to a more integrated focus on outreach best practices expressed through an offering of plenary sessions, full individual concurrent sessions, symposia and poster presentations. This will also allow you to attend a variety of popular and helpful sessions, as well as hear from colleagues regarding their initiatives and the scholarly contributions deriving from their engagement.

I am very pleased to welcome Dr. Hiram Fitzgerald to Auburn University to deliver our keynote address on the advancing focus of engagement at research institutions. Dr. Fitzgerald is the President of the Board of Directors of the Engagement Scholarship Consortium and he has extensive engagement experience as the Associate Provost for University and Outreach Engagement at Michigan State University. I am also looking forward to the involvement of Dr. Cheryl Morgan, the 2012 recipient of the Outreach Award for Excellence. Dr. Morgan and other symposium presenters have built amazing careers grounded in engagement and the production of outreach scholarship.

This year’s program demonstrates that Auburn University is at the forefront of the discussion on faculty engagement throughout the academy. I hope you find the symposium informative and I encourage you to take full advantage of the opportunity to network with some of America’s finest outreach scholars – right here at Auburn University!

Best regards,

Royrickers Cook, Ph.D.
Assistant Vice President for University Outreach

Enhancing inquiry through technology enhanced science instruction for secondary schools
S. Raj Chaudhury
Biggio Center for the Advancement of Teaching and Learning
Technology tools empower students to engage in the study of abstract topics in science by providing knowledge integration and assessment environments. Teachers looking to use inquiry based approaches in science can benefit from the resources of the Technology Enhanced Learning in Science project, which will be presented in this talk.

The Alabama Healthy Marriage and Relationship Education Initiative: 10 years of Strengthening Families
Francesca Adler-Baeder
College of Human Sciences
Learn about the 10-year experience of developing and implementing relationship education programs through a university-community partnership. Information includes: Key elements of “healthy relationships” programs, lessons learned from developing partnerships for community-based program delivery and research, and results of program effects for the youth and adult program participants.

Auburn University/University of Malawi Public Health Learning Collaborative to Improve Life Quality
Constance Smith Hendricks
School of Nursing
The presentation will describe the implementation of a yearlong Study Abroad initiative. AU nursing students enrolled the required public health course worked collaboratively with Kamuzu College of Nursing-University of Malawi to provide direct primary health care to persons in Malawi, Africa as an alternative clinical experience. The project is an outcome of an academic/corporate partnership between Auburn University and the 100X Development Foundation, an AU alumni owned organization.

Alabama Possible: University-Community Partnerships have the Power to Reduce Poverty
Kristine Scott and Ralph Foster
Alabama Poverty Project and University Outreach
Alabama is the nation’s fifth poorest state. The Alabama Poverty Project (APP) brings together higher education institutions, faith communities, and individuals to create poverty awareness and effectively address its underlying causes. Session attendees will learn about poverty’s causes and impacts, explore Auburn’s partnership with APP, and envision utilizing transformational engagement.
Concurrent Sessions

Dance for Underserved Students
Carey Andrzejewski and Adrienne Wilson
College of Education and College of Liberal Arts
Dance for Underserved Students is a collaboration between Dr. Carey Andrzejewski (College of Education) and Ms. Adrienne Wilson (College of Liberal Arts). Our goal is to address the “opportunity gap” in dance by bringing high quality, relevant dance instruction to underserved students in local high schools (see Darling-Hammond, 2010).

College of Liberal Arts Engaged Scholarship: The Intersection of Scholarship, Outreach and Teaching
Barb Bondy, Kathleen Hale, and Tricia Serviss
College of Liberal Arts
This panel will focus on the intersection of scholarship, outreach and teaching. Three CLA faculty members who foster community and civic engagement in the classroom will present scholarship that emerged from nonprofit leadership, community interaction, and teaching that address civic challenges.

The Office of Public Service - Service Learning Colloquia
Jon Mason, Director, Serve Alabama: The Governor’s Office of Faith-Based and Volunteer Service and LaChasta White, Serve Alabama AmeriCorps Program Assistant
Learn about the role of Serve Alabama as the “unofficial office of volunteerism” for the state. Speakers will discuss National Service, including AmeriCorps, Vista, NCCC, Senior Corps and the new FEMA Corps national service program available for anyone 18 – 85 interested in a deeper volunteer experience. AmeriCorps members serve in local schools, statewide programs and for national programs such as Habitat for Humanity and Teach for America. The session is open to all Auburn students, faculty and staff.

Prison Education Outreach: The Dynamic Intersection of Research, Teaching, and Service
Peggy Shippen and Nick Derzis
College of Education
This presentation will provide an overview of nearly a decade of educational outreach in Alabama prisons and juvenile facilities. The importance of establishing deep and lasting professional relationships is a critical component to assuring the impact of outreach projects and propagating outreach scholarship.

Symposia Sessions

15 Minute Presentations

University Outreach Departments Symposia: The Office of Professional and Continuing Education: Your Education Partner for Life

Hope Stockton, Director
University Outreach
Realizing the importance of Outreach at Auburn University, the Director of the Office of Professional and Continuing Education (OPCE) will present areas of outreach expertise, engagement and training currently available to students, faculty and communities across the state of Alabama, nationally and internationally. Additionally, as a part of a very robust unit on the AU campus, OPCE Director will present the multi-disciplinary interrelatedness and individually notoriety of the office as driven by the Auburn University mission.

University Outreach Departments Symposia: Center for Governmental Services

Don-Terry Veal, Director
University Outreach
Realizing the importance of Outreach at Auburn University, the Director of the Center for governmental Services (CGS) will present areas of outreach expertise, engagement and training currently available to students, faculty and communities across the state of Alabama, nationally and internationally. Additionally, as a part of a very robust unit on the AU campus, the CGS Director will present the multi-disciplinary interrelatedness and individually notoriety of the center as driven by the Auburn University mission.

Education as Transformation: The Alabama Prison Arts + Education Project

Kyes Stevens
College of Human Sciences
This presentation is meant to be an introduction to the Alabama Prison Arts + Education Project as an outreach program engaging 5 Colleges at Auburn, as well as the University of Alabama, to work within prisons in Alabama providing needed educational programming.

Isaac Scott Hathaway: Sculptor of Minds and Clay

Mark Wilson
College of Liberal Arts
College of Liberal Arts students participated in the 2012 Appalachian Teaching Project through community collaboration with the Tuskegee Human & Civil Rights Multicultural Center on the life and work of African American artist Isaac Scott Hathaway. Students created a pamphlet, podcast, and tested learning tools for the public to understand and experience Hathaway's work.

Symposia Sessions

Graduate Outreach through Collaborative Professional Services in Design and Construction

Paul W. Holley
McWhorter School of Building Science, College of Architecture, Design and Construction
This presentation features an established interdisciplinary graduate program in which outreach comes in the form of professional-grade schematic design and pre-construction services to public and non-profit entities that either face disaster-related recovery, or otherwise would not have the resources to procure these services from the private sector.

University Outreach Departments Symposia: Office of Public Service and Encyclopedia of Alabama

Ralph Foster, Director
University Outreach
Realizing the importance of Outreach at Auburn University, the Director of the Office of Public Service (OPS) will present areas of outreach expertise, engagement and service currently available to students, faculty and communities across the state of Alabama, nationally and internationally. Additionally, as a part of a very robust unit on the AU campus, the OPS Director will present the multi-disciplinary interrelatedness and individually notoriety of the office as driven by the Auburn University mission.

University Outreach Departments Symposia: ECDI - Economic and Community Development Institute

Joe Sumners, Director
University Outreach
Realizing the importance of Outreach at Auburn University, the Director of the Economic and Community Development Institute (ECDI) will present areas of outreach expertise, engagement, service and training currently available to students, faculty and communities across the state of Alabama, nationally and internationally. Additionally, as a part of a very robust unit on the AU campus, the ECDI Director will present the multi-disciplinary interrelatedness and individually notoriety of the institute as driven by the Auburn University mission.

Plantbot Genetics Collaborative Faculty Outreach Collaboration

Wendy DesChene and Jeff Schmuki
College of Liberal Arts and Georgia Southern University
The collaborative team of Wendy DesChene and Jeff Schmuki focus upon the ethics of our current food production and distribution systems as PlantBot Genetics Inc., a parody of the Monsanto Corporation. PlantBot Genetics engages and motivates unsuspecting audiences in considering the food they eat and how it arrives on their plates.

Empowering Bayou-La-Batre through Use of Digital Signage Technologies
Chetan S. Sankar and David Mixson
College of Business
This outreach effort leverages our research capabilities to empower the coastal community of Bayou La Batre to better communicate with its diverse, multicultural population and help bridge the communication and response gap of its residents by installing two digital signs in its city offices and at Boat SoS.

TASSAL: The Alabama STEM Studio for After-school Learning
Christine Schnittka and Mary Lou Ewald
College Education and College of Science and Mathematics
TASSAL is an afterschool program designed to teach Science, Technology, Engineering and Math activities and concepts. The TASSAL directors provide professional development for afterschool teachers in the state.

Poster Sessions 30 Minute Presentations

Improving classroom instruction: Alabama Math, Science, and Technology Initiative
Beth Hickman
AMSTI-AU
A three year U. S. Department of Education longitudinal study conducted in Alabama shows the effectiveness of the Alabama Math, Science, and Technology Initiative (AMSTI), which aims to improve mathematics and science achievement in the state's K-12 schools. AMSTI at Auburn University serves both in-service and pre-service teachers.

Green Retrofits: Implementing a LID Demonstration Site to Promote Green Infrastructure Planning and Outreach
Charlene LeBleu, Rebecca O’Neal Dagg, and Carla Jackson Bell
College of Architecture, Design and Construction
This study examines the relationship between green infrastructure, and LOW Impact Development (LID) and their potential for outreach through environmental education. The focus is on Auburn’s Boykin Community Center, its outdated storm water management practices and its potential to serve as a template for green infrastructure planning, LID and outreach environmental education for a new generation of young students.
Concurrent, Symposia and Poster Session Abstracts

Poster Sessions

Auburn Family University: Addressing College Access through K-12 Family Collaborations
Christiana Russell
University Outreach
Auburn University initiated collaborations with two school districts in Alabama, faculty and community agencies, to address barriers to educational success for youth in rural communities. The initiative is part of the university strategic plan which designed to prepare students for college and instill a vision that college is attainable.

Tele-Audiology: Intercontinental Assessment of Hearing
Kelli M Watts and Sandra Clark-Lewis
College of Liberal Arts
Through the CMDS Guatemala Outreach Project, street children in Guatemala City receive access to hearing healthcare. However since the trip is only made annually, children have to wait a year for follow-up. Recently, remote testing was established so that children who need additional testing can be evaluated sooner.

Green Teams: Leading Green and Saving Green in Four Alabama Public Schools
John Mehaffey, Lisa Kensler and Lynne Patrick
College of Education
The focus of this poster is a Competitive Outreach Scholarship Grant funded in 2012 that aims to facilitate the greening of four Alabama public schools. The four participating schools, Fairhope Intermediate School, J. Larry Newton School, Notasulga High School and Opelika Middle School are focused on conserving school funds through energy, water conservation and waste reduction. Regionally, this program will highlight the work of participating schools in a Go Green-Save Green Playbook and provide models of change for schools throughout Alabama. Globally, the changes made by the schools will contribute to reducing carbon-dioxide emissions and other aspects of their ecological footprint, thus aiding efforts to address global environmental issues such as climate change.

Coming to the Table: Alabama Food Policy Council
Norbert Wilson, Michelle R. Worosz, and Will Thomas
College of Agriculture
In early 2012, a broad coalition of stakeholders created a Steering Committee to develop an Alabama Food Policy Council (AFPC). The group has since developed a survey and conducted nine listening sessions with 228 people from across the state to learn about Alabamians’ understandings of, and opinions about, their local food and agriculture system; to identify the issues that residents believe are most pressing for a burgeoning AFPC; and to determine the capacity of various communities in helping to improve the local food and agriculture system.
