The Auburn University String and Chamber Music Camp is led by members of the Auburn University Music Department string faculty and guest artists. It is open to musicians aged 10-18 who play violin, viola, cello, and string bass. The camp will offer a wide range of musical experiences including chamber music, orchestra, and jazz improvisation, as well as a movement awareness session taught by a certified Alexander Technique instructor.

Participants for this intensive three day residential workshop should have at least two years of instruction (private or class) on their instruments and two years of participation in small and/or large instrumental ensembles. Students will be placed in ensembles according to their level of prior experience. The camp will include a public performance as well as social activities.

In addition to their work in the Goodwin Music Hall, participants will experience campus-life while residing in Auburn's resident dormitories, eating at campus dining facilities, and enjoying evening social and recreational activities. Camp participants will have 24/7 counselor supervision. Tuition is $349 and includes all instruction, housing, meals, recreational activities, a camp photo, and t-shirt. A commuter rate is available for $299. For program questions, please contact Lisa Caravan, Auburn University Music Department, at (334) 844-8192.
